

GERMANY THANKS HOOVER FOR AID IN TIME OF NEED

Gratitude Expressed in An Official Government
Proclamation

NATIONS ARE IN ACCORD

Experts Will Work Out the Details of the Agreement

BERLIN, Germany, July 7.—(INS)— Gratitude to President Hoover for assistance to Germany in her "hour of greatest economic danger" was expressed today in an official government proclamation.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The French and American Governments are in agreement on the principle of President Hoover's plan for a year's holiday on intergovernmental debts.

The accord was announced late yesterday by the Chief Executive at the White House. It brings every important creditor nation into agreement, thus uniting economic relief by a postponement of debts growing out of the four-year conflict.

The agreement was reached after eleven days of negotiations between the French Government and Ambassador Edge and Secretary Mellon in Paris.

It constituted the acceptance by the United States of a formula offered by the French. It reconciled the viewpoints of the two Governments between the American position put forward in the President's plan and the French counter-proposals.

In the negotiations for a settlement many extraneous points, even some considered by the United States outside its province to settle, had arisen.
These were adjusted amicably to the satisfaction of each.

Each side yielded points. Details which will make the agreement finally effective will be worked out by experts. Their work will be technical in character, but they will be instructed

Will Take Flowers To Flowerless On Thursday

Mrs. Charles Peet will take any flowers contributed locally for the "Flowers for the Flowerless" work to the Pratt street booth, Thursday morning.

Last week the local commercial flower growers contributed very generously to this work.

Jacob Schmidt gave lovely geraniums, the Bristol Flower Growers, baby's breath, and the Pitzonka Pansy Farm, quantities of delphinium.

These were much admired by the workers and much appreciated by the beneficiary.

Debate War Debt Holiday

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, with the American Ambassador to France and French Government leaders, are shown above outside the Quai D'Orsay in Paris, where they have been discussing the participation of the French Republic in the Hoover war debt holiday plan. Left to right: M. Pierre Laval, French Premier; Secretary Mellon; M. Briand, French Foreign Minister, and Walter E. Edge, American Ambassador to France.

CLAIMS INHERITANCE DUE SEVEN YEARS AGO

Henry Einsig, Bristol Township, Will Get Only Small Sum

TOTALS ABOUT $15.29

YOYRK, July 7.—Entitled to $15.29 as his share in the estate of Catharine Myers since June, of 1920, Henry Ein-sig, Bristol, R. D. 1, Monday came into court and signified his intention of accepting the inheritance, which amounts to $17.19, because of accrued interest. He will have to pay some costs that will cut the small sum somewhat.

In June, 1920, Katharine Pilkay, administratrix of the estate of Catharine Myers, filed her report which showed that Einsig was entitled to share in a balance amounting to $15.29. He never took the money, and seven years later, on June 6, 1927, the fund was paid into court and was in custody of the Judges awaiting claim for it.

Such claim was made on Monday, and the Court will give its check for the amount, less costs.

"SUMMERSEAT," HISTORIC MANSION IN MORRISVILLE, HAS BEEN RESTORED AND WILL BE USED FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES

It is Here That George Washington is Believed to Have Planned the Campaign Leading to Crossing of the Delaware—Signer of Declaration of Independence Once Made the House His Place of Abode

Taking its place with other historic structures in Bucks County is "Summerseat," in Morrisville, which is now the property of residents of that borough to the north along the Delaware River.

There, it is believed, George Washington planned the campaign which led to the crossing of the Delaware.
A signer of the Declaration of Independence once resided in the house; and Marquis de LaFayette was entertained there.

The building is restored as nearly as possible to the original condition.
It has taken its place among the historic buildings of the country that are being cared for and visited annually by many.

Summerseat is not to be a museum.
It will serve a very practical purpose as well, for beginning next September it is to be the domestic science cottage of the Robert Morris High School. In fact it is only by being converted to such a use that the house could be rescued at all, and it is doubtful if the girls of the school and their instructors who will be in charge of the mansion, will permit it to be abused. Then at some future time, perhaps, the way will be clear to preserving it just as a relic of that romantic but difficult age when the American Colonies were seething with rebellion and preparing to throw off the English rule.

Several times in recent years, Summerseat has been threatened with destruction, and it is largely through the efforts of Mayor Thomas B. Stock-ham, of Morrisville, and the co-operation of the Board of Education and the Chamber of Commerce that the town has come into ownership of the sole survivor of those fine residences which evidenced the importance of Morrisville more than a century and a half ago.

None of the other mansions, now either in ruins or entirely vanished, had a more romantic or eventful carreer than Summerseat. Like many men and events of that bygone era, its story is a mixture of fact and legend, but enough is authenticated to make it a place of more than casual interest.

As long ago as 1773, Thomas Barclay, wealthy Philadelphia merchant, purchased 221 acres of land at Colvin's Ferry, opposite Trenton's Town, on the Delaware River. On a knoll, from whence there was a pleasant outlook over the fields and trees to the river and the little village beyond, Barclay built his mansion, apparently intending it as a country seat.

General George Washington spent a week during December of 1776 at Summerseat, during the time it was owned by Barclay. Events in the history of this country followed quickly from the time the first president left Summerseat. He went to the farm of William Keith, Newtown, and then into camp above the Trenton Falls. At midnight of December 25th, that year, he crossed the ice-jammed river, and marched on to Trenton to take part in that battle, which turned the Revolution to success for the struggling colonies.

In evidence of the fact that Washington did actually stay at Summerseat, local historians point to a letter he wrote to the president of Congress.
It is dated "At Mr. Berkeley's, Summerseat, Pennsylvania." In his diary, under date of December 9, he also records that General Mifflin came up from Philadelphia to tell him that all the military stores "yet remain in Philadelphia." Another notation, December 13, states:

"I shall remove farther up the river to be near the main body of my small army, with which every possible opposition shall be given to any further approach of the enemy towards Philadelphia."

The house appears to have been used from time to time during the War for Independence by other officers of the Continental Army, and some years ago Mayor Thomas B.
Stockham obtained from the Library of Congress a photostat copy of a letter written to General Washington by General Sullivan. The letter is dated: "Barclay's House (near Trenton), Jan. 10, 1781, 8 o'clock eveng." The letter refers to two spies from the British, to determine whose fate a court consisting of General Wayne, Colonels Butler and Steward and Major Washington was then sitting. The note carries a postscript, dated "Jan.
11, 8 o'clock a. m.," and stating "The British Emissaries are condemned and will be executed this morning at nine."

For some reason or other Barclay didn't long retain possession of his charming place, where during the war so many distinguished generals had been entertained. There is a record of his sale of the place in 1791 to Robert Morris, "financier of the Revolution" and Signer of the Declaration of Independence, who some years after was to die penniless, friendless and alone in Philadelphia. There is no reason to believe that Robert Morris ever lived at Summerseat, for he had a fine mansion of his own nearby, and it was probably just a portion of the large holdings he acquired in the vicinity. Morris, it appears, had at one time ideas for extensive developments

TROOPERS SEIZE THREE ATOP MEAT TRUCK

Believe They Prevented An Attempt to Rob Vehicle Near Morrisville

"RACKET" IS ALLEGED

MORRISVILLE, July 7.—Three men were arrested as State police saw them on the roof of a truck as they were jolted upward when the truck crossed the bridge carrying the Bristol pike over the Lehigh Canal, midway between Morrisville and Bristol, about 4 a. m. today.

They are Charles McGlyn, thirty-five, Richmond street, near Ann; John Sturges, twenty, E. Thompson street, near Montgomery avenue, and Joseph Murphy, twenty-seven, E. Fletcher street, near Girard avenue, Philadelphia. All are held at the Morrisville station on charges of attempted robbery.

The policemen, John Stewart, Harry Christ and William Farrell, said they believed the prisoners planned to hi-jack the truck, containing meat, and being driven from New York to Philadelphia by Frank Mitchell, twenty-five, Columbia avenue, near Front street, Philadelphia.

Police also said they would question the prisoners to determine if they are affiliated with a truck owners' "protective" association.

The policemen said they were patrolling roads in the section on a tip that trucks of owners who refused to join the association and pay "dues" were to be hi-jacked to bring them into line.

The policemen said they had trailed Mitchell's truck for some distance before they saw the men on top crawling toward the driver's seat.

The policemen said the prisoners had left an automobile beside the highway about two miles back.

Sturges last February confessed robbing Samuel Hedge of $300 in a hold-up of Hedge's roadside stand near Neshaminy Falls in 1927, but was released because Hedge could not be found to prosecute.

LANGHORNE TEACHER

LIEUT. R. STOMPLER

U. S. ARMY LIEUTENANT NAMED AS TEACHER

R. Stompler Will Join Staff of Langhorne-Middletown
High School

PENN STATE GRADUATE

Lieutenant R. Stompler, of the United States Army, will teach in the Langhorne-Middletown High School next fall. He is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto F. Stompler, superintendent of the Langhorne Spring Water Company. Mr. and Mrs. Stompler celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary by attending his graduation from Penn State on June 8th.

Lieutenant Stompler was graduated from the Langhorne High School in 1927 and is very well known in lower Bucks County. Prior to his graduation, he was president of the student council, editor of the year book, substitute teacher for the grade school, and won third honors in scholastic standing in the high school.

Entering the Pennsylvania State College in 1927, he enrolled in the School of Education where he made a big name for himself. He was a member of the rifle team, the Outing Club, and secretary of the Social Problems Club.

Mr. Stompler was one of a few appointed to do his practice teaching in the new million dollar Central Senior High School of the city of Johnstown, Pa. Here he did such splendid work that his admirers, as a gesture of appreciation, gave him all expenses for a three day visit to Chicago, Ill., and Fort Wayne, Ind. He visited the schools of these cities. Upon his return from the West, he was chosen by Mr. Hayes, superintendent of schools of State College, as the substitute teacher for the secondary schools of that city. The students, in a contest, voted Stompler the third most popular teacher in the system.

Lieutenant Stompler has an excellent military record and was very well liked by his entire command. He is known on the college campus as Captain Stompler. He is now engaged in graduate work at the state institution.

RIVER CHANNEL TO BE COMPLETED BY JULY NEXT YEAR

20-Foot Path for Ships is Expected to Create New Commerce on River

HAVE DISPOSAL AREAS

Places for Disposal of Dredged Material Being Provided

The twenty-foot channel in the Delaware River from Philadelphia to Trenton will be completed on or before July 1, 1932, and prepared to receive river and seagoing vessels for the transportation of passengers and freight, it was announced yesterday by Colonel Earl I. Brown, army engineer, in charge at Philadelphia.

This, it is expected, will be a great boon to the Delaware Valley as large vessels will then be able to discharge and load cargoes along the water front.

This project, for which nearly $800,000 has been appropriated by the Government, has been under way since the completion of the thirty-five-foot channel from Philadelphia to the sea early last year.

The channel from Allegheny avenue to the Delair bridge of the Pennsylvania Railroad is twenty-eight feet deep. The twenty-foot channel continues from that point to Trenton.

At the present time work on the section from Delair bridge to Roebling is near completion. From Roebling to Bordentown the dredging of the channel has been completed. The last section, from Bordentown to Trenton, has been awarded to a dredging firm and work will be started in a few days, according to Colonel Brown.

The terminals at Trenton for the receiving of ships are expected to be finished by the time the channel is ready for navigation.

It was further stipulated that there would be furnished to the United States, without cost, suitable areas, bulkheads if necessary, for the disposal of dredged materials. The final appropriation for dredging between Bordentown and Trenton was made available last month.

It was pointed out yesterday by Colonel Brown that nearly 50 per cent of the vessels now using Delaware River draw less than twenty feet with cargo. The twenty-foot channel will accommodate vessels up to approximately 2,000 tons, he said.

"This project should create a large amount of new commerce on the river and be of great benefit to New Jersey as well as to Philadelphia," according to Colonel Brown. "The channel is of vital importance to the commerce of both States and is a step ahead in shipping improvements in this area."

A number of areas for the disposal of the dredged material have been provided here and will be used as soon as possible.

Bee Stings Auto Driver, Causing Car to Crash

Francis J. Lantz, 47, and his wife, Mary, of 3552 Englewood street, Philadelphia, were slightly injured yesterday afternoon when a bee flew into their automobile and stung Mr. Lantz on the nose, causing him to lose control of the machine as they rode along the Bristol Pike toward Bristol.

The car ran off the highway and crashed into a telegraph pole, snapping it off at the bottom. Corporal Budihais, of the Langhorne State Highway Patrol, had the victims rushed to the office of Dr. H. T. Webb for treatment.

The accident occurred near the Bristol Cemetery.

LATEST NEWS

Philadelphia, July 7.—Clad in overalls, a man's vest and cap, a pretty young woman who claims to be Mrs. Violet Walker, 19, of Buffalo, N. Y., was picked up as a suspicious character here today while trying to hitch-hike. She was asking passing motorists for a "hop to Baltimore." Two men were arrested in the same vicinity as vagrants. They gave their names as Herbert Moseberth, 23, Portsmouth, Va., and William Davis, 29, New York City. They declared they did not know the young woman and were not traveling with her. The woman asserted she was estranged from her husband and was en route to Texas. She said she was tired of married life and "skirts" and was wearing overalls because they were more comfortable for hitch-hiking. She was detained here for a hearing.

New York City, July 7.—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, record 'round-the-world fliers, accompanied by their wives and F. C. Hall, sponsor of the trip, arrived by train today from Washington where they had received the official greeting of the nation from President Hoover. The two fliers intended to spend a quiet day in preparation for the Aviation Industry banquet at which they will be honored tonight in the Hotel Astor.

EQUINOCTIAL, BY HECK!

In the good old days, when farmers and not meteorologists were the chief weather prophets severe storms in summer were called "equinoctial storms." The sun crossed the line, they told us, and crossing raised the very devil with the elements. Nowadays the government's weather experts will not let us believe such stuff.

Perhaps the meteorologists are right, but their high-sounding, technical expositions will not knock it out of the heads of goosebone prophets and their multitudinous following that the severe storms common at this time of the year are equinoctial storms and have something to do with the sun passing over, or about to pass over, the equator, or equinox. It is then that conditions are most propitious for the storms and most dangerous for those who dwell in their path. In other words, they are equinoctial, and in a very literal sense.

All of which goes to show that the old-fashioned weather forecasters knew what they were talking about, after all, just as they knew what they were talking about when they repeated their little jingles, such as—Rain in the morning, farmers take warning; Rain in the night, farmer's delight.

It often happens this way. Scientists labor for years and produce finally a great truth; which truth happens frequently to be exactly the truth that everyone had known all along.

UNNECESSARY NOISE

Some one has launched an international campaign for silence. "Noise," he says, "is the great destroyer of nerves. It decreases the power of human efforts and is the greatest menace of our time." To this assertion any city dweller who rises to the matin song of clanging can and rumbling wheels and goes to bed to the tune of automobile horns and gears will say amen.

Cards bearing 10 commandments have been distributed. They admonish all to "speak softly," "work quietly," and "relax often." If the campaign were generally successful, there might be difficulty for the faithful in the matter of obeying both of the two mandates, "talk little" and "listen much," for there would be little to be listened to.

If the spirit which prescribes loud talking and careless door-slramming could be extended to muffle traffic noises and abolish the din of construction gangs, community life would not be the wearing existence that it now is. In such a millennium radio would dispense with loud-speakers, or else broadcast only such music as the whispering tenor sings. For a campaign song, it might be suggested that the noise-suppressors use "Silent Night"—and Day.

Of hope for the success of the campaign the public has none. Heretofore, the only thing talk for quiet accomplished was augmentation of the whole sum of noise by that much talk.

Most brides expect to be kept in all the little luxuries to which they haven't been accustomed.

In the old days they didn't call them "young intellectuals"; they simply said they were untidy.

"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin

Pretty Mary Lou Thurston pretends she is Delight, Hartford to help Travers Lorrimer, shell-shocked son of the wealthy Margaret Lorrimer, regain his health. Travers had mistaken Mary Lou for Delight, whom he is supposed to have married in England. No trace can be found of Delight. Travers agrees to start all over with friendship. Months of happy companionship follow with Travers more in love with Delight than ever. At Christmas he presents Mary Lou with a sapphire ring, referring to her not wearing the "seal" ring. This leads Mary Lou to believe that he really married Delight, using a seal ring. Mary Lou loves Travers and finds deception hard. Travers and Mary Lou visit friends in Florida. Mrs. Lorrimer breaks her arm and they are called home. The memory of Delight prevents Mary Lou from revealing her love. She believes Travers loves her because he thinks she is Delight.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

SPRING was coming to Westwood, veiling the bare trees in a pale and glamorous green, Spring flowers bloomed in the borders and there were great Russian violets, single heads of purple fragrance in the hot-house.

Mary Lou had graduated from the mild and misleadingly named "Flapper," for Lorrimer, despite her protests, had bought her a new saddle horse, all her own, a delicious, velvet-nosed, large-eyed creature, with a coat of polished mahogany, named, for no good reason, "Lady Bountiful." And he was teaching Mary Lou to jump, down in the big paddock.

He himself was going to a Connecticut flying field several times a week and flying, with a pilot he had known in the old days. He was, once again, a student flier, looking forward to the day when he would solo. He was finding great exhilaration in it, and genuine happiness.

Beginning Again

"Everything's different," he told Mary Lou, "the ships are different, and I've forgotten more than I ever learned! But I can learn again!" he determined.

On his flying days, his mother—and Mary Lou as well—knew no peace until his car drove up to the door and honked its gay greeting to them both. He was driving a car again, another good sign. But neither woman gave him any sign of their fear and their loss of serenity while he was absent from them. He had to try his wings again. They had made up their minds to that. And—he was happy. That was all that mattered.

He'd been away from them for more than a day also, that Spring, going up to the Adirondacks to see Mac and coming back full of splendid reports of that staunch little fellow's grit and good progress. For Mac was going to get well, regardless, if only to show his gratitude to the man who had given him such an incentive in life, again.

The English revue came to town and Larry was busier than a one-armed paper hanger. He rushed hither and yon and announced that he was certainly making good, having accomplished the feat of getting the revue in every paper in town for six consecutive days. And coming out to Westwood, in a blaze of self-glorification, he was so entranced with his success, and the further exciting fact that he had sold two full length stories to "big time" magazines, that he brushed over to see Jenny, found her out in her kennels administering the first aid to a sick Chow dog and proposed to her then and there in an atmosphere of disinfectants and dog!

And, possibly because he said firmly: "Nor will I take 'no' for an answer. I'm not foolin', woman!" Jenny accepted him.

They weren't, they said, after breaking the news to the startled Wynnes, and coming to Westwood House to further spread the tidings, they weren't, they repeated, getting married for a year or so yet; "although," said Jenny, "I don't as a rule believe in long engagements."

A Worthy Goal.

And in that year Larry expected, or rather decided, to establish himself as a free lance writer, a novelist and a playwright. He thought, however, after a little chat with Mr. Wynne, that he'd manage to hang on to his newspaper job for a time, just in case editors didn't see things his way every time! And then, at the end of that rosy, indefinite period, he and Jenny would live, oh, not in Greenwich Village, but maybe on Brooklyn Heights, in one of those converted brownstone houses—"converted to what?" asked Lorrimer, laughing

"I envy those kids—they've everything they want, Delight."

And as she didn't answer, he urged, low compellingly:

"I—I'm not breaking any promises, but how long are you going to keep me waiting—how long?" he asked, again.

To her utter consternation, amazement and anguish she began to cry—quite simply and heart-brokenly, like a child. Her little face was all distorted and the big tears ran unchecked down her pink cheeks.

They were, luckily, quite alone, in the morning room, the day after Jenny's engagement had been thus informally announced. Lorrimer was instantly contrite.

"Darling, don't. What is it? I didn't mean to hurt you. I can't stand seeing you cry—"

Recklessly, for all his promises, he took her in his arms and she yielded briefly to the blessed comfort of his strength about her and his lips on her hair, leaning her abashed head against him and sobbing, quite quietly, but as if she couldn't stop.

"I haven't seen you cry," he mused, "since—the day you came back to me. And I haven't "Everything's different," he told Mary Lou, and I've forgotten more than I ever learned!"

—and Jenny would learn to type his manuscripts, as became an author's wife!

"She'll have to get along on lots today and nothing tomorrow," announced Larry sternly. "Champagne for breakfast—"

"I hate champagne, darling!" Jenny reminded him.

"Well, certified milk, then, and honey, and brown bread; and for tomorrow's dinner a dry crust. That's the life! For I won't, that's standing before the Westwood fireplace, and looking menacing, 'for I won't live on your father's money. Not that he isn't a darned good scout, at that!' admitted Larry.

"How about mother's? Mother was a Lee," said Jenny, with an elfin grin. "Lee flour, you know. Self-rising."

"Nor on mother's either!" answered Larry firmly.

"Well," said Jenny with a sigh, "I'll supply the jam on the dry crust. After all, Larry, I've some of my own!"

So that was that. Mary Lou and Margaret and Lorrimer viewed the beglamored, ridiculous, dear couple with mingled emotions. Envy was uppermost, as far as Mary Lou and Lorrimer were concerned. He

Only Human

"I'm sorry to be such an idiot," she murmured.

"Was it the fall this morning? You didn't lie to me when you said you weren't hurt?" he asked anxiously. "Were you pretty well shaken up—shall we have Doc in to look you over?"

"No. I didn't lie. I'm quite all right," she said and touched his coat sleeves with her finger tips and tried to smile.

She'd taken a tumble that morning, Lady Bountiful having been more capricious than usual. But she hadn't been hurt, not a bit.

She had climbed back into the saddle and dared the beautiful animal to do that to her again! No, her fall hadn't shaken her, but her emotions had.

It couldn't go on much longer, she thought.

Nor could it, although she had no idea what the veiled, not far distant future was holding for her, for them all.

"Summerseat" To Be Used For School Purposes

In the little settlement to which he gave his name and which would doubtless have materialized had not misfortune overtaken him.

This historic place passed to the hands of George Clymer, Philadelphia Quaker later. He resided there in his later years. Clymer conveyed Summerseat in 1805 to his son, Henry, who lived a short distance further up the Delaware. In 1812 Henry Clymer sold the place to Mrs. Elizabeth Waddell. It was during the time the Waddell family lived at the place that Lafayette visited there.

The property was bought by John Humfrey Osborne, in the late fifties. Some years ago the Morrisville Board of Education was seeking a site for its new high school, and it bought from the developers for $8,500 a tract of four acres, which included the mansion. On this land now stands the Robert Morris High School, and Summerseat, very nearly as it was when Barclay built it.

Weeks will be required, in the opinion of American officials, for the working out of the details.

Meanwhile, the State Department turned its attention to points raised by other countries in submitting their approvals in principle to the American plan. Practically all of the statements by the United States since the negotiations with Paris began had been issued by Acting Secretary Castle of the State Department.

HAZLETON, Pa., July 7—(INS)—Believed to hold an employment record in the Pennsylvania anthracite industry, Benjamin Griffiths has retired as a mine foreman for the Lehigh Valley Coal Company here after 70 years' work in the mines.

Starting in the collieries of South Wales at the age of 9, he came to the United States in 1866 and immediately went to work in the Pennsylvania fields. In the years he was a foreman, company officials said, he never had a man in his force killed or burned by gas.

FEDERALS WIN FOR 4TH CONSECUTIVE TIME

(By T. M. Juno)

Three tallies in the last inning were enough for the Federals to score their fourth consecutive Bristol Twilight League victory. The Hibernians were the victims with the final count being 5-4.

Going into the fatal inning, the "Hibs" sported a 3-2 edge. With two gone Sullivan passed both W. Fine and Dietrich. J. Fine singled to right center and W. Fine and Dietrich counted. Riola followed with a double and J. Fine crossed with the winning run.

Sullivan and Jones were the twirlers. Both allowed nine safe blows and were effective in the pinches. Sullivan passed four batters while Jones was much steadier, not issuing a pass.

"Gene" Dugan batted out a home run in the Hibernians' last turn with the stick but as the bases were bare it only added another run to the losers' total. "Angie" McCafferty's bare-handed catch of Dietrich's low line drive in the third frame was the feature of the game. Mulligan and Cochrane led the hitter with three bingles each.

Dietrich's double followed by Riola's single scored the first Federal's run in the second canto while a pass to Custer and Cochrane's single through Dougherty scored the second tally in the fourth.

Two "Hiboes" tallies were counted in the third when McCafferty reached first on Riola's miscue and Sullivan beat out a bunt along the first base line. Dietrich made a wild throw to second and the runners moved a base. A hit by Leyden scored both runners. Mulligan's single and Sullivan's two-bagger to left scored the third Hibernians' run in the fourth. Dugan's homer accounted for the fourth run in the fifth.

Sir Walter's Products

By HARDIN BURNLEY

HAS baseball's "Big Train" imparted some of his one-time hurling magic to Carl Fischer after two seasons of careful grooming? Will Sir Walter, manager of the Washington Senators, live to see his southpaw pupil acclaimed definitely as "another Johnson?"

Fans frequently have been discussing those questions since the 27-year-old Fischer began blazing his way by opposition batters from the beginning of this season. Carl came to the Senators two years ago with an excellent record achieved with the International League Newark Club. He had plenty of blaze and curves, but poor control. Owner Clark Griffith (and what a pitcher he was in his day), "Bucky" Harris, then manager, and other experts did not think much of Fischer's future. But "Old Master" Johnson was prexy of Washington's pitchers and he saw a real prospect in the 6-foot southpaw. Sir Walter drilled the wild hawk in control. The fruits of his teaching are being garnered this year. Fischer's blaze ball approaches that of "The Big Train" himself when "Barney" was burning 'em over in his best days. His control is good. Now Fischer looms definitely as a distinctly great pitcher.

In addition to Fischer, another big individual factor in keeping the Senators near the top is Sam West, their slugging center fielder. Ever since coming up from the Southern League, where he had been beamed by a left-hander, Sam had been a sucker for southpaws until this season. It looked like a permanent case of being plate-shy when facing lefties until Sir Walter devised a cure for that ailment. He had Fischer, Bob Burke and Lloyd Brown—southpaws all—speed them up to West in practice. Hours of this worked wonders with Sam. He soon shed himself of the psychic spell held over him by lefties. He can hit them now as hard and as often as he does right-handers.

Johnson has several other gems on his team, but none make this "Old Master's" eyes sparkle brighter than do Fischer and West, both "made in Washington, D. C.," as far as diamond stardom goes.
